

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

The Australasian Journal of Peer Learning is a new enterprise produced in collaboration between the PASS National Centre at the University of Wollongong, the Teaching and Learning Unit at The University of Melbourne, and members of the PASS community.

Our intention is to develop a forum wherein high quality research, practices or innovations in peer learning programs, such as PASS and PALS, can be readily disseminated. This journal will provide a higher education focus on peer learning programs, with an emphasis on advancing our understanding and sharing and improving practice.

We encourage you to be part of this exciting new venture. In the first issue we aim to publish on a range of perspectives. The Journal intends to encourage practitioners to write about innovative new ideas and practices. Thus, we invite notes of up to 1500 words, that may raise new ideas or outline an innovative practice. We also invite short papers of up to 3,000 words. Papers and notes will be reviewed for consistency with the purpose of the journal.
