Pamela Humphreys is currently IELTS Manager at the Griffith University Test Centre and joint Co-ordinator of the English Language Enhancement Course, the pivotal component of the Griffith English Language Enhancement Strategy (GELES). As a member of Griffith University's English Language Working Party, she has been involved in the creation and implementation of the GELES over the last two years and is also involved in the research to measure its impact. Pamela has held a variety of positions in the English language industry over two decades from teacher to Director of Studies. She is the author of the IELTS Express workbooks (Cengage) and a materials writer for Cambridge ESOL.

In 2008 DEEWR published the Good Practice Principles for International Students in Australian Universities. This presentation will offer a synopsis of the approach taken by Griffith University to meet these principles through the implementation of the Griffith English Language Enhancement Strategy (GELES). The five strands of this multi-dimensional strategy, including an English language Enhancement Course as a key component, support students throughout the student life-cycle.

This talk will be of interest to those involved in developing or delivering similar support initiatives and to staff who teach international students.
