9. TEACHING

Judged by any standard, my teaching record can not be considered any less than outstanding:

- I have acquired teaching experience in eleven Western and Middle –Eastern universities. I have taught a variety of subjects at the undergraduate and the postgraduate levels. I have taught small classes (less than 10 students) and large classes (more than 500 students), and I have supervised a large number of Ph.D., Masters and Honors students, many of whom now occupy senior positions in Australia and the Middle East. I have initiated, planned, introduced the developed many courses in various universities.

I believe that my teaching approach, methodology and style are all geared towards simplifying the subject matter of the relevant course and achieving maximum understanding while maintaining academic rigor. The results of my teaching evaluation in various universities suggest excellent teaching performance, for both small and large classes. .

- I have always encouraged junior staff to enroll for higher degrees and expressed readiness to help, either through direct or joint supervision or by offering research ideas, techniques, references and the like. Moreover, I have written several books to help with teaching activities and have participated effectively in the review of existing courses, and in initiating and planning new courses.
- The quality of my teaching is evident from the following facts:
 1. I have won an international award from the American Biographical Institute for outstanding contributions to the teaching profession.
 2. I have been nominated as one of the best 5 per cent teachers in Australian Universities.
 3. I have been awarded the University of Wollongong VC teaching award for teaching excellence in 1996.
